Dear Colonel Armitage:

In early October two of my men, [redacted] visited your command with a group of other intelligence officers. They have spoken very highly of the warm and courteous treatment accorded them, and I wish to thank you personally for the consideration shown by your command.

Two of your men have been especially commended to me by both [redacted] and I have enclosed two copies of this letter in the event you should choose to have a copy placed in each of their personnel folders. These two men are Lt. Col. Frank R. Schaf and Mr. Eugene Black. Both men were tireless in their attention to the needs of the group, and displayed zeal above and beyond the call of normal duty.
